"Future is Public" is a multi-disciplinary online course focusing on policy debates and worker struggles pushing for new visions of public services and work in the public sector. These visions are seeking to move the debate about public services beyond the state vs the private to anchor it instead on universal values of democracy and participation, justice, transparency, access and affordability, quality services and care for the environment

The course targets workers, trade unionists and labour activists, practitioners and labour researchers, but it is open to anyone interested in these debates.
